Had the building fallen 15 minutes before it did, the loss of life would have been very great. The most of the workmen, it is believed, had just left, with the exception of two, named John Wilson, residing at No. 34 Hester-st. Hearing a rumbing sound these two raw into the street, but not in time to entirely escape. Both were struck by portions of the falling wall. Hagan escaped with a few slight bruises, and was enabled to go to his house. Wilson was partially buried, but was soon after got out by the first Precinct Police, under Capt.
